

FLORIDA

Orange City is very pleasantly situated in the high rolling pine lands in the southern part of Volusia County, 113 miles south of Jacksonville, and 25 miles from the Atlantic coast, yet sufficiently removed from the ocean to avoid the occasional sharp winds of winter, but within reach of its cooling breezes which greatly modify the heat of summer. This rolling country is covered with the odorous pine, whose breath is laden with health and strength; the atmosphere is dry, and free from all the miasma that lingers along the coast and the banks of the rivers and many lakes, the stimulating, bracing power of the sea breeze is felt as it is wafted through the pines with its soothing influence and quiets the over-taxed nerves.

CLIMATE.—The climate is mild and restful, alike to the homeseeker, the tourist seeking pleasure, and the invalid seeking health. It is safe to say that nine-tenths of the days can be spent in healthful out-of-doors recreation.

WATER.—(See last page.)

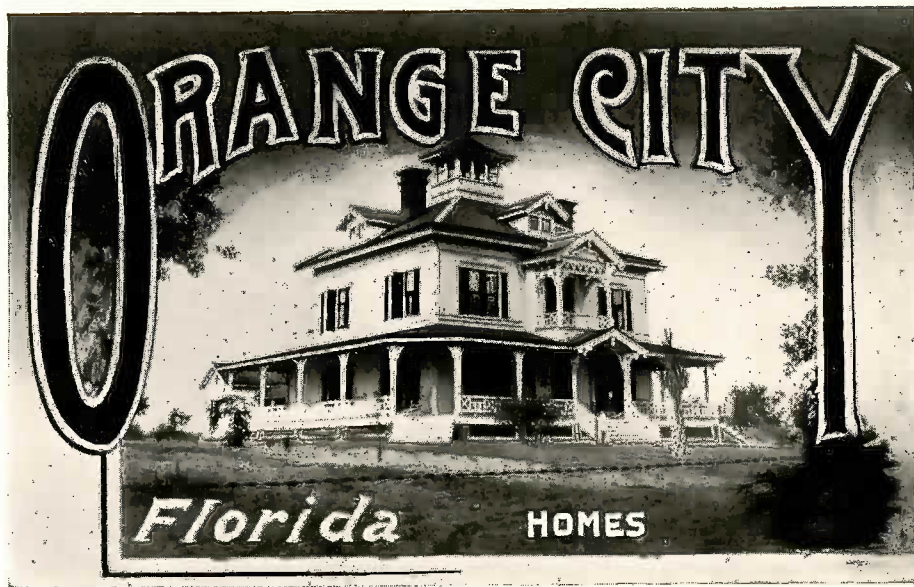

GROWTH.—Orange City has a steady, healthy growth, and more persons decide to locate from year to year as they become acquainted with the place and its environments; coming to spend the winter they almost always come again, and many make themselves homes in this sunny southland, with its new walks and beautiful shell roads.

HOMES.—Orange City is a beautiful thriving town, with hotel and boarding house accommodations; also there are cottages to rent for those who prefer a private home. While this place is highly recommended as a place of residence for the year, it is equally popular as a place for northern people seeking a winter home, where, if they do not quaff from the fountain of perpetual youth, they revel in a climate that is nearly perfect.

While in the northern hills and plains the snowdrifts linger, and the March winds howl, here life may be passed out-of-doors, beneath one's own vine and fig tree, while early and late the sweet notes of the song birds delight the ear. Any one desiring a home in the south need have no hesitancy in settling here, as statistics amply prove its healthfulness.

Property of all kinds can be bought cheaper than at any other place having equal attractions.

ORANGE CITY WATER

Orange City is the home of the Orange City Mineral Spring Company, bottlers of the well known and justly famous Orange City Water. This pure, light and sparkling ideal table water is sold extensively throughout Florida. It will be found on the menu cards of Florida's leading hotels, and is also shipped throughout the State to residents at their winter homes.

Orange City homes are universally supplied with this pure water by an ample and efficient system of mains.

In a country-wide competition, at the St. Louis Worlds Fair, at which practically all the famous Mineral Springs of the United States participated Orange City Water received the diploma of highest award for purity and excellence.

People find this light, sparkling water a relief from many of the ills arising from disordered kidneys, stomach and liver. Physicians attribute the freedom of this section from sickness largely to the purity of the water.

Analysis and further details of Orange City Water will be gladly furnished upon application.
